“ I just came to her house a couple of weeks ago to see her. She cooked crab cake to treat me and her family. Every year during the Holiday Season, her house looks beautiful with all the Christmas decorations and I told her, "This year I would like to take some pictures of your house to show my friends what Christmas in New York is like!" I have only known her for a few years but her warming personality made me feel very welcome, like another member of her family. She shared a lot of stories with me of when she was young, how she met her husband, and the secrets to her cooking. She was so easy to talk to. I'm going to miss her very much!

“ I was a classmate of Anna Mae's all through junior high and high school at Magnet Cove, Arkansas. We were friends, cheerleaders and even played on the basketball team together some. A favorite memory of mine is when we were seniors in high school and had a "girls bunkin party" (now known as sleepovers) at my house with 4 or 5 other girlfriends. We were on Christmas break at the time and even though there was a forecast for snow (a rarity for us in the south) we took my family car and went into Hot Springs to go to a movie and just "mess around" as girls will do. The snow came while we were in the movie and we drove back to my house through a winter wonderland, getting stuck on a hillside. A group of kids along with our friends gave us a push up the hill as we laughed and had a great time while my parents were worried sick. We made it home just fine and it was a fun time for the whole group (except worried parents). We were just silly teenage girls having fun.

“ Love this story Margaret. Mom loved keeping up with all of her classmates from Arkansas and loved reminiscing about years ago. I recently came across some old photos from nursing school of hers and we had such a good time talking about those .
